

LETTING GO

Kent and Renee Miller

No doubt the year 2020 will go down in the history books of infamy. Few are clinging to the lingering aftertaste of a year soured by a pandemic and the uncertainty that life is now bringing. The world is changing. Our direction is changing. Mournfulness prevails among many who are holding on to the memories of a bygone era with hopes that life will return to the way it was, curbing the growing uncertainty that the future holds. The fear of the unknown causes us to hold tighter to that which was familiar.

But our resistance puts us at odds with what, spiritually, we need to accomplish: the letting go of redundant behaviors that no longer serve us, opening a new paradigm of creative thinking, and expanding our ability to interact with the quantum field around us to recreate the world we live in. It is allowing us the time for contemplation and evaluation of where we have been and where we are going.

If the purpose of the universe is expanding consciousness, then, too, is the purpose of our existence within this experiential learning field. For many, the absence of work, or the working from home, has freed up previously unavailable time to contemplate the multiplicity of events unfolding. We have many lessons to choose from to expand our consciousness. Now we have the time to research and connect the dots for a clearer picture of the events happening, awakening to what is really going on within this learning field, moving us away from the illusions of the past.

We are awakening to the outer controls that have shaped our thinking process and influenced our desires. As we migrate away from this externally-driven group think, we free our minds to allow the real consciousness to develop. A growing awareness of the artificial limitations cast upon our creativeness begins to seep in. “Purgatory,” for some, starts at a young age, conscripted to a path that has been dictated by another. The growing child becomes stifled in the understanding of who they really are, narrowing the field of possibilities that lay before.

All creative aspects are available to humanity, to influence the energy stream, but we have limited the quantum possibilities within our own minds. The challenges put before us now are encouraging humanity to step out of our box to see a bigger world, freeing our minds to create in new and wondrous ways.

The many challenges that 2020 have brought are calling us to redesign our lives, expand the way we think, and recreate the way we work. The pandemic is creating an obstacle to our conscripted way of life, diverting us around the materialism and setting us back on a path aligned with the natural world. Many are reaching for more outdoor activities, bonding with our Mother in new ways as we escape our captivity.

This is our opportunity to explore the inner Self and our purpose for being here. When we turn inward, listening to the guiding inner voice, we liberate our soul, allowing the higher self to guide. It is our time to cast aside the limitations within our minds, expanding our horizons, and opening the quantum field to explore and create. Now we can meditate on life's lessons, expanding in wisdom.

Humanity is at a juncture of letting go of the old ways in order that we might redesign a brighter future, to step into our new role as higher conceptual beings, more spiritually connected, with a greater understanding of the world we live in, our connection to All That Is, who we really are, and where we are going.

Kent Miller unexpectedly discovered that he was able to telepathically communicate with The Ancients, ancient teachers of the Creator, and other universal entities. Kent and wife, Renee, have compiled these lessons at the request of their guides into The Augmentation of Man books: A Study in Renaissance and The Acquiescence of Humanity, available on Amazon.

Visit them at The Augmentation of Man with Kent and Renee Miller on YouTube, Bitchute, Twitter, Anchor.fm, Facebook and Parler, where they discuss these topics and more. You can also visit their website at verdiance.com.